Parbhani man killed in custody because he was a Dalit: Rahul

Fadnavis Calls Gandhi's Visit Political Move

Rahul Gandhi spent around 20-25 minutes interacting with Suryawanshi's family members in Parbhani on Monday. He termed the young man's death in judicial custody on Dec 15 "a murder" by police.

The same thing in Parbhani as well," Fadnavis told reporters. Suryawanshi, a 35-year-old resident of Pune, was arrested in one of the seven cases registered for rioting and arson in Parbhani over the desecration of a replica of the Constitution. He died while in judicial custody on Dec 15. Preliminary reports said he was pursuing law from a Parbhani-based college and was living in a rented apartment at Shan Karigar in Mumbai.

On Monday, the Congress MP spent around 20-25 minutes interacting with Suryawanshi's family. He said: "We want this matter to be thoroughly investigated. What is needed is justice, not politics," Gandhi said.

However, chief minister Devendra Fadnavis countered Gandhi by alleging that his Parbhani visit was political. "Rahul Gandhi's visit was nothing but political. Over the years, he has been trying to create a caste-based divide in society, and he did "The perpetrators of his murder must face stringent punishment. After his meeting with Suryawanshi's family, Rahul Gandhi also met the family members of Ambedkarite activist Vilasrao Deshmukh.

Gandhi said: "The Suryawanshi family has shown me Somnath's postmortem report, video, and photographs (of the victim). This is a cent per cent custodial death. Police have murdered Somnath. Chief minister even made a false statement in the assembly that Somnath was murdered because he is a Dalit, and was protecting the Constitution. We want this matter to be resolved and whenever I meet Somnath should be punished. I am not satisfied with whatever has been done in this case."

Refuting Fadnavis' claim that his visit was political, Gandhi said: "A murder has been committed. Action should be taken to ensure justice is delivered in the case. A particular ideology is responsible for the murder."

The provisional postmortem report on Suryawanshi's death, which included a camera procedure at the govt medical college and hospital (GMCH), Chhatrapati Sambhajinagar on Dec 16 had concluded that "shock following multiple injuries" was the immediate cause of death.

Fadnavis said: "State government has to take action and that is why we have already ordered a judicial inquiry. If the inquiry report reveals that the injuries caused the death, we will not spare the culprits." When asked about NCP (SP) chief Sharad Pawar calling him after visiting Parbhani and Beed, Fadnavis said: "He urged me to personally look into the case. I have told him I am already monitoring them."

He was buried near a pond. A leaflet signed by Gangaloor area committee alleged that he was beaten, and workers/digging villages that they would meet the same fate if they worked as informers.

Barely 20km from this killing, Maoists abducted two tribal men and marched them before Jan Adalat deep inside the forest. Details are yet sketchy but one of them has been identified as Kamlu Potam. According to the sources, Maoist commanders accused them of working for the police and ordered them murdered.

Their kin and other villagers were so terrified that they didn't dare inform cops. As soon as the families found the remains on the outskirts of the village, they performed the death rituals. - Rashmi Dham move, saying the policy had led to a downfall in the quality of education, as students moved to higher classes.

"With the scrapping of no detention policy, the fear of failing will enable them to learn at least basic concepts to excel in life," said Vaishali (single name), a teacher at a Delhi government school.

Educationist MK Sridhar who was present in the 2015 CABE meeting, said the new notified rules are balanced, progressive and do not dilute RTE.

"The new rules are putting pressure for academic achievement on students, parents and teachers. The rules ask principals of the schools to make a list of students who are being back and personally monitor their progress with respect to the identified learning gap. I would suggest precautionary measures should be taken before the examination with class teachers identifying such students who are not good at studies to ensure children do not fail," Sridhar said.
