

From 21 members to 5 in a year: Top Maoist command decimated

NEW DELHI: The leadership of the Communist Party of India (Maoist) has experienced a staggering decline this year, with its central committee (CC) members dropping from 21 to just five within the span of a single year, according to data from the Chhattisgarh Police. Officials engaged in anti-insurgency operations noted that the central committee — the highest decision-making body of the proscribed outfit — had at least 45 members in its ranks until three years ago.

The latest blow to Left-Wing Extremism (LWE) in the country came on December 25, when security forces shot dead Ganesh Ulke, a member of the CPI (Maoist)'s central committee who oversaw insurgent operations in Odisha and carried a cumulative bounty of ₹10 crore. Ulke's demise marks the eleventh death of a Central Committee member so far this ranking leaders arrested, killed in gunfights, or surrendered.

In the past year, security forces across Chhattisgarh, Maharashtra, Bihar, Jharkhand, Andhra Pradesh, Telangana, and Odisha neutralised at least 270 Maoists, secured the surrender of more than 1,225, and arrested 680 others, including top leaders. Those killed include senior cadres such as Madvi Hidma, Nambala Keshava Rao (Basavaraju), and central Committee members Uday (alias Gajrala Rao), Katter Ramachandra Reddy, and Kadri Satyavolu.

Even as security forces across different states are working to end Maoism by March 31, 2026 — a deadline set by the Union government — officials said that the party has suffered its most extensive damage this year, with its top narayan Reddy.

According to security forces' records, the five remaining members are all above 60, with the eldest, Ganpathy (also known as Mupalla Lakshman Rao or Ramaiah), believed to be in his late 70s. Ganpathy was formerly the party's general secretary and now holds the designation of Politburo and CC member. Apart from Ganpathy, the four others are Thippiri Tirupati (alias Devji or Sudharshan), Misir Besra (aka Bhaskar), Anil Da (aka Tuwan), and Mallaraj Reddy (aka Satanna). Officials, who asked not to be named, said that Ganpathy is suspected to be hiding along the borders of Chhattisgarh's Bijapur, Telangana, and Maharashtra. During the peak of LWE extremism, the CPI (Maoist) maintained 40-45 CC members in its ranks.

An officer from a Central Armed Police Force engaged in LWE operations said, "There are fewer than 100-150 full-time armed cadres in the south Bastar region below the Indravati River that divides North and South Bastar. These cadres are hiding in the remote areas of Chhattisgarh and the bordering areas. In North Bastar, there may be just 10-15 cadres who refused to surrender during the mass surrender of Maoists two months ago. The CC members, who are the primary decision-making leaders of the CPI (Maoist), are in their 60s and cannot move around as much as they could a decade ago. This, combined with the loss of cadres on the ground through surrender, death, or arrest, has put them in a spot where they are fighting a lost battle."

Among notable deaths of CC members this year were of Basavaraju (killed in Chhattisgarh's Narayanpur on May 21), Madvi Hidma (killed in Andhra Pradesh's Maredumilli Mandal on November 18), and Katta Ramachandra Reddy (aka Raju) and Kadri Satyavolu (aka Kosa) on September 22 in Narayanpur.

NEW DELHI: Congress MP Digvijaya Singh on Saturday demanded decentralisation in his party and reminded the leadership that one of the key components of the Udaipur resolution — to set up an election management committee — has not been formed yet, people familiar with the matter said.

Addressing the Congress Working Committee (CWC) meeting, the former Madhya Pradesh chief minister is said to have given the example of MGNREGA to highlight the importance of decentralisation, stressing that while MGNREGA had decentralised power, the new VB-G Ram G law has done the opposite.

Just like the MGNREGA, the Congress should also decentralise power, the people quoted Singh as saying. During the meeting, the senior leader also flagged the impending implementation of one of the 2022 Udaipur conclave proposals, which was to set up a dedicated election management committee to handle poll preparations. But more than three years later, the panel is yet to be formed.

Air 'severe' in NCR again, Delhi on edge as winds stall

NEW DELHI/GURUGRAM/NOIDA/GHAZIABAD: Air quality in the National Capital Region plummeted once again on Saturday, with Noida and Ghaziabad recording "severe" air quality index (AQI), while Delhi and Greater Noida were on the brink of breaching the "severe" category, according to the Central Pollution Control Board's (CPCB)'s daily national bulletin and real-time data.

The India Meteorological Department (IMD) has issued a yellow alert for Sunday morning, warning of moderate to dense fog and cold wave-like conditions, which will keep wind speed slow and AQI at the same level, experts said.

According to the CPCB's 24-hour average bulletin, Noida recorded an AQI of 409 ("severe"), and neighbouring Ghaziabad clocked an AQI of 404 ("severe") at 4pm. While Delhi recorded an AQI of 385 ("very poor") at 4pm, as per the bulletin, it deteriorated throughout the day, reaching 390 by 6pm and 391 by 10pm.

Gurugram, meanwhile, fared relatively better, clocking an AQI of 299 ("poor") at 4pm. Of four continuous air quality monitoring stations operational on the day in Gurugram, readings at Vikas Sadan and Gwal Pahari at 5pm were in the "very poor" category, recording aAQI levels of 340 and 339, respectively. The station at Sector 51 recorded an AQI of 340, while data from the Teri Gram monitoring station was unavailable.

The CPCB classifies an AQI of 51 to 100 as "satisfactory", 101 to 200 as "moderate", 201 to 300 as "poor", 301 to 400 as "very poor", and a reading above 400 as "severe".

Mahesh Palawat, vice president at Skymet, a private weather forecaster, said, "The wind speed was very low on Saturday, around 4-5 kmph, with the wind speed reaching 8-9 kmph only for a few hours in the afternoon and then again dropping by the evening. As a result, Delhi saw spike in pollution. Similar wind conditions will persist till January 1 due to the influence of a western disturbance."

"Following that, northwesterlies are likely to return with a wind speed of 10-15 kmph, which will help in improving Delhi's air quality considerably," Palawat said.

Forecasts by the Air Quality Early Warning System for Delhi (AQEWS) suggest that the capital's air quality is likely to remain in the "very poor" category for the next few days as well, as Delhi continues to battle with the annual problem of pollution that spikes for a second time around the end of December.

"The air quality is likely to be in the 'very poor' category from Sunday to Tuesday. The outlook for the subsequent six days is that the air quality is likely to be in the 'very poor' category," said the AQEWS bulletin on Saturday evening.

However, there was no change in curbs under the Graded Response Action Plan (Grap). Stages I-3 continue to remain in force, after Stage-4 curbs were curtailed last Wednesday.

Meanwhile, police in Gurugram launched a campaign to improve visibility amid foggy conditions.

"In the wake of dense fog, the 'Reflective Gurugram' campaign was launched on Thursday, installing reflective tapes on vehicles, trees, and major crossings to prevent any untoward incidents," said Satyapal Yadav, assistant commissioner of police (highways and traffic headquarters).

Mercury expected to dip
Delhi recorded a minimum temperature of 7.6 degrees Celsius

(C) on the day, which was one degree above normal, and a maximum temperature of 22.2°C, which was 1.8°C above normal. However, IMD warned of colder conditions. "A yellow alert has been issued for Sunday. Moderate fog at many places is expected to be observed, with dense fog at isolated places during the morning hours on Sunday," said an IMD official.

The official said that cold wave conditions might also be observed in isolated pockets of Delhi for the next two days.

Palawat said, "While the wind speed has dropped due to the influence of a western disturbance, the temperature continues to be affected by the northwesterlies. This will continue for a few more days, when the temperature might dip further and cold wave might be observed."

PUNE: With face covered using a black cloth and hands tied, local gang leader Bandu Andekar, in jail for the alleged murder of his grandson, was on Saturday taken to a government office, where he filed his nomination for upcoming civic polls in Pune amid police security.

Andekar filed the nomination paper as an independent candidate, a day after a special MCOCA court in Pune granted conditional permission to him, currently in judicial custody in the murder case of his grandson Ayush Komkar.

His sister-in-law Laxmi Andekar and daughter-in-law Sonali Andekar, also accused in the same case, also filed their nomination papers as per the court's permission.

Prasad Katkar, PMC election officer, said, "As Andekar's form was incomplete, it was not accepted. There are chances that he will again visit the ward office to submit the nomination form."

Murder case

Ayush was shot dead on September 5 in Nana Peth. He is the son of Ganesh Komkar, who is an accused in the murder case of former Nationalist Congress Party (NCP) corporator and Bandu Andekar's son Vannar Andekar.

Bandu alias Suryakant Ranaji Andekar (70), Laxmi Udaykant Andekar (60), Sonali Vanraj Andekar (36), all residents of Nana Peth, along with 15 others, are in judicial custody for their alleged involvement in the killing.
