'Trump open to dialogue with Kim to achieve fully denuclearised N Korea'

The Trump administration unveiled a package of actions against North Korea on Thursday

AGENCIES

WASHINGTON, 26 JULY

US President Donald Trump remains open to engagement with North Korean leader Kim Jong-un to achieve a "fully denuclearised" North Korea, a White House official said a day after his administration announced a raft of actions to disrupt Pyongyang's illicit revenue generation schemes.

The Trump administration unveiled a package of actions against North Korea on Thursday, including offering rewards for information about seven North Korean nationals involved in a scheme believed to raise funds for the reclusive regime's nuclear and missile programmes.

"President Trump, in his first term, held three historic summits with North Korean Leader Kim Jong-un that stabilised the Korean Peninsula and achieved the first-ever leader-level agreement on denuclearisation," the official told Yonhap News Agency via email.

"The president retains those objectives and remains open to engaging with Leader Kim to achieve a fully denuclearised North Korea," the official added.

The official was responding to a question about whether Thursday's actions against the North signalled that the Trump administration assesses diplomacy with Pyongyang

Expectations have persisted that Trump might seek to resume his personal diplomacy with Kim, which led to three in-person meetings between them to be difficult for the time being, and that it would focus on sanctions and other pressure-focused measures to bring North Korea back to dialogue, Yonhap news agency reported.

Expectations have persisted that Trump might seek to resume his personal diplomacy with Kim, which led to three in-person meetings between them - the first in Singapore in 2018, the second in Hanoi in February 2019 and the third at the international summit in June 2019.

Last month, Trump said he would get "the conflict solved" with North Korea if there is one - a remark that added to the anticipation that he might want to kick-start dialogue with Kim.

On Thursday, the Trump administration took a series of steps against the North, including sanctioning a North Korean trading firm, warning that it "will not stand idly by" when Pyongyang profits from what it called criminal activities to fund its "destabilising" weapons development programs.

Those activities included a scheme to send the North's information technology workers overseas, cryptocurrency theft, trafficking in counterfeit goods, and oil smuggling.

US-China trade talks: Can China reduce its export dependence?

AGENCIES

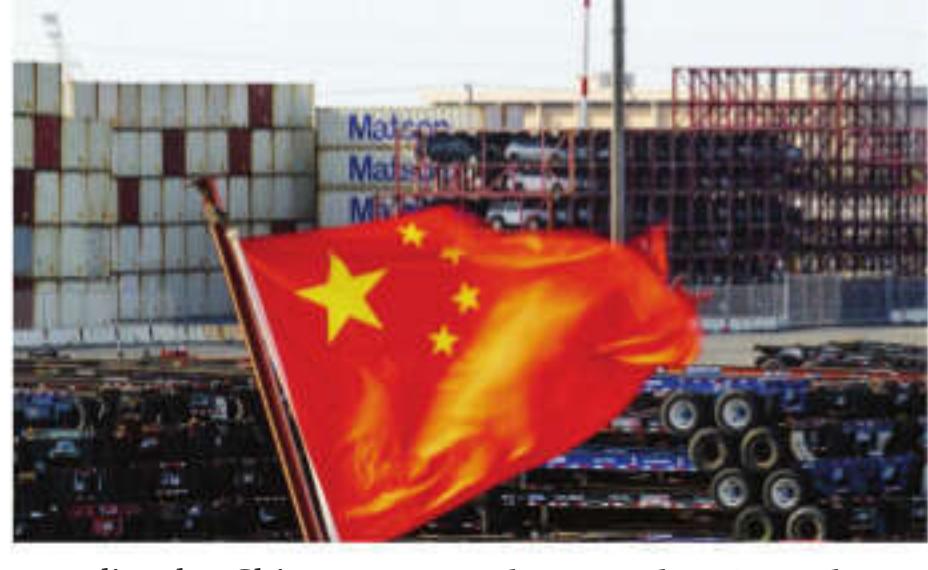

BEIJING, 26 JULY

China's high dependence on exports will likely be a key focus of a new round of U.S.-China trade talks this coming week in Stockholm, but a trade deal would not necessarily help Beijing to rebalance its economy.

US Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent has said he hopes the negotiations can take up this issue, along with China's purchases of oil from Russia and Iran, which undercut American sanctions on those two countries.

Hopes rose for a breakthrough in talks after U.S. President Donald Trump announced deals with Japan, Indonesia and the Philippines this week.

The US wants China to do two things: Reduce what both the US and the European Union see as excess production capacity in many industries, including steel and electric vehicles. And secondly, to take steps to increase spending by Chinese consumers so the economy relies more on domestic demand and less on exports.

"We could also discuss the elephant in the room, which is this great rebalancing that the Chinese need to do," Bessent told financial news network CNBC. He said China's share of global manufacturing exports at nearly 30 per cent, "can't get any bigger, and it should probably shrink."

The issues are not new, and China has been working to address them for years, more for domestic reasons than to reduce its trade surpluses with the US and other countries.

Bessent's predecessor as treasury secretary, Janet Yellen, made industrial policy a focus of a trip to China last year. She blamed government subsidies for flooding the global market with "artificially cheap Chinese products."

The European Union, whose top leaders met their Chinese counterparts in Beijing on Thursday, has cited subsidies to justify EU tariffs on electric vehicles made in China.

In the 1980s, the U.S. pressured Japan to boost consumer spending when American manufacturing was overwhelmed by exports from the likes of Toyota and Sony. Economists have long argued that China likewise needs to transform into a more consumer-driven economy. Consumer spending accounts for less than 40 per cent of China's economy, versus close to 70 per cent in the United States and about 54 per cent in Japan.

Chinese leaders have spoken about both factory overcapacity and weak consumer spending as long-term problems and have sought over the past 20 years to find ways to rebalance the economy away from export manufacturing and massive investments in dams, roads, railways and other infrastructure.

Fierce price wars have prompted critical reports in official media saying that companies are "racing to the bottom," skimping on quality and even safety to reduce costs.

Myanmar to strengthen digital economy with 2030 roadmap

AGENCIES

YANGON, 26 JULY

Myanmar is working to accelerate its digital transformation with the implementation of the Myanmar Digital Economy Roadmap 2030, the state-owned daily Myanma Alinn reported on Saturday.

A working coordination meeting of the country's Digital Economy Development Committee (DEDC) was held at the Ministry of Commerce in Nay Pyi Taw on Friday to review progress and set priorities for the coming years, Xinhua News Agency reported, citing the report.

Speaking at the meeting, patron of the committee Union Minister for Transport and Communications General Mya Tun Oo said that the rapid acceleration of growth through digital means is a key factor for developing

Voters in Taiwan reject bid to oust China-friendly lawmakers in poll

AGENCIES

TAIPEI, 26 JULY

Taiwanese voters rejected a bid to oust about one-fifth of their lawmakers, all from the opposition Nationalist Party, in a recall election Saturday, dampening hopes for the ruling party to flip the balance of power in the self-ruled island's legislature.

The independence-leaning ruling Democratic Progressive Party won last year's presidential election, but the China-friendly Nationalists, also known as the KMT, and the smaller Taiwan People's Party have enough seats to form a majority bloc.

Official preliminary results showed that the recall efforts failed to remove any of the two dozen KMT lawmakers. The scale of the recall elections is unprecedented, with another seven KMT lawmakers facing a similar vote on 23 August.

The KMT currently holds 52 seats, while the ruling DPP holds 51 seats. For the DPP to secure a legislative majority, at least six KMT lawmakers would need to be ousted, and the ruling party would need to win the by-elections, which must be held within three months of the announcement of results.

For the recall to pass, more than a quarter of eligible voters in the electoral district must vote in favor of it, and the total number of supporters must exceed those voting against.

The poll closed at 4 p.m. local time. Taiwan's Central Election Commission will announce the official results on 1 August.

If next month's poll goes against the DPP, President Lai's government may face continued legislative resistance ahead of the 2028 elections.
